

Testing

On a quiet hilltop, a tiny blue door appeared overnight, and no one in the village knew who placed it there. When Mira knocked, the door slowly opened on its own, spilling out a warm golden light that carried the smell of cinnamon. Inside was a spiral staircase leading deep underground. At the bottom, she discovered a library filled with floating books, each whispering a different story as it drifted by. One book gently landed in her hands, glowing brighter than the others. When she opened it, a soft voice whispered, "We've been waiting for you," and in that moment, Mira realized her ordinary life was about to change forever.